The result? Accurate tackling and a more responsive player experience that feels more realistic than ever before. Key Features: Enhanced Player Physics Improvements to the new ball animation and physicality in the player make a huge difference in the feeling of control during game play. Multiple improvements have been made to the player animations and physics – for example, new animation timing and rotational physics. There have also been a number of refinements to the goalkeeper and several other components related to the physicality of the player. HyperMotion Technology Real-life data collected from 22 players and real-life testing have helped to further the development and evolution of the game. FIFA 22 will feature ‘HyperMotion Technology’, with the inclusion of a new ‘in-game’ third-person camera that can follow any player on the field, any time, to provide an unprecedented player experience. New Stadiums and Goal Systems The team at Visual Concepts has been involved in the design and development of FUT Champions, the official FUT club game, and has taken this feedback and experience into the development of stadiums and goal systems for FIFA 22. These elements are designed to make those moments of magic come to life in the game. The stadiums have been expanded to include fans. The player will no longer see a wall of fans whenever they look to the sides of the pitch; instead, the teams are more responsive to the public and will react in different ways depending on the mood of the crowd. The goal systems have also been upgraded, to make the moments of fantasy come to life through custom-built animations: “Some of the goal animations on the platform are quite intricate, so we wanted to find a way to show these animations when they happen, rather than trying to capture them all in one shot. The goal systems themselves now give the players the chance to perform special moves, which are built from the ground up to react to the movement of the players, the direction of the goal, and the angle of the camera on the wall. For example, when the player performs a freekick at the near post, this kicks off a number of physics actions that will cause the ball to curve into a particular direction.” Dynamically Moving Player Animations The animation of the attacking and defensive play has been given a significant amount of attention over the last few years, and it’s now evolved even further in FIFA 22. ”

As is known, motor vehicles may be equipped with various different types of electronic systems including systems which sense vehicle speed and control activation or deactivation of the vehicle speed dependent cruise control (CDCC) and the vehicle shift (speed dependent manual transmission (SMT) system. For vehicles equipped with systems controlling vehicle speed (e.g., CDCC), the cruise control system may sense a vehicle speed and activate and deactivate the vehicle speed at a substantially constant speed. For example, in a highway cruise control mode, the speed of the vehicle is held at a predetermined level so as not to affect the traffic around the vehicle. In a full or "tank" mode the speed of the vehicle is regulated to a constant speed by a cruise control valve. Typically, speed of a vehicle operated in a so-called "pedal assist" mode (e.g., when vehicle speeds greater than road speed are supported by an SMT system) is limited to a fixed speed. For example, a fixed speed may be set as the lowest speed of the vehicle or the predetermined speed may be set as the highest speed of the vehicle when the vehicle is operated in a so-called "hand full" mode. For example, in a case where a throttle percentage is selected as a parameter to which the vehicle speed is referred by the SMT system, the vehicle speed of the vehicle is managed as an amount of oxygen supplied to the engine in response to the throttle percentage and a fixed value for the vehicle speed. The fixed value may be set as a speed at which the
