The show, which is sold out more than two months before it begins, means there will be a lot of fans at the venue tonight from 9pm to midnight. Wearing plush mohair scarves, some fans carried signs saying 'We love Morrissey' while others made their own candles to light outside before their hero took to the stage. Morrissey fans are pictured lighting candles at the O2 arena tonight, where he will play a sell-out concert for the first time in five years Holding a sign saying 'Morrissey', Morrissey fan Sarah Fairhall, from Shropshire, said she came to see the singer who has been making comeback plans in recent years. She said: "I came up here to see him for the first time in five years. I came to see his sold-out concert. "I think it's going to be great. Even if he doesn't make it sound very good on the night, at least we'll get to see him." Another fan, Chris Kerr, said he came to see Morrissey after seeing news he was in the city. He said: "I came up from London to see him, but it's sold out! I was gutted but I've got tickets. It's his first gig in years. It's good that he's finally
