Adobe Photoshop: The Most Popular Image Editing Software of All Time [Infographic] Prepared by: Jeff B. What is Photoshop? The Photoshop program was released in 1987 by Adobe Systems and is the oldest image editing software in use today. Adobe Photoshop is used for both printing, marketing and product design. Some of the many different ways it can be used to promote a product include: For Design and Print: Photoshop is the best program for graphic design, product packaging design, promotional print design, and even press mockups. For Photography: Photoshop is used for most all forms of photography including digital photography. For Animation: Photoshop is used as the editing software and also as the creation tool for animation. As a Movie Making Tool: Photoshop is used for video editing. As a Video Player: Photoshop is used to create video players for internet streaming. You may be wondering why so many different use cases as this article will show. Examples: What are some different Photoshop Examples? A Photoshop Image can be a lot of different things. Below are some of the different things you may see in an image that may indicate this is a "photoshopped" image. What makes an image "photoshopped"? In Photoshop there is a layer mask that can be either red, yellow, green or blue. The color of the layer mask is always indicated by the percentage of pixels showing white. When the layer mask is red, it means a layer is not applied. The image is totally opaque. When the layer mask is yellow, it means a layer is partially transparent. When the layer mask is green, it means a layer is completely transparent. When the layer mask is blue, it means a layer is completely opaque and covered with a layer mask. The color of the layer mask is indicated with the color of the text at the bottom of the layers palette (when you open the layers palette). It looks like this: Tip: If you just want to know which layer is selected for the grayed out "A" you can use Window > Layers to make sure that the active layer is showing. You can change the color of the layer mask by choosing Layer > Layer Mask > Colorize. When you "paste" a photo into an existing background in Photoshop, it will retain

Q: Nuxt : how do i create a dynamic route based on the current user (user-data)? Currently the topbar script it's hard coded and gets the locale from the URL. is there anyway to have a function that will dynamically create this route based on the current user/client? If the client is logged in as localhost:3000/ui/lang/{{lang}}/ then it should route the user to the path...ui/lang/{{lang}} I know this won't work like that, but just to give an idea of what I'd like to do. This is how it works now... (if the user isn't logged in) I'd like to change it to if(user.loggedIn) { this.url = user.loggedIn? '/ui/lang/{{lang}}' : '/ui/' } Because I don't want to hard code the user.loggedIn condition in the topbar template. I used the following Nuxt.js script to try and get the current user import axios from 'axios'; async getUser () { let data = await axios.get(""); console.log(data) this.setUser(data.data); } setUser (userData) { this.user = userData; } I need something like the following.. this.url = user.loggedIn? '/ui/lang/{{lang}}' : '/ui/' What is the best way to check if the user is logged in and then work out where to route them? A: I ended up using the following code to dynamically create a path based on the current user. This was based on this Stackoverflow question mounted () { let user = this.$route.params.user; if (user) { this.$router.push({
