Discover the best way to level up your Trove classes! Power Up Your Class Power Ups let you add, remove and boost a class without creating a new one. Each system type (earth, air, water and cosmic) has three upgrade slots. Boosting is the only way to add new slots to your systems. Teleport to an Upgrade Location Available globally, teleport to any upgrade location by clicking on its icon. It's a small world after all! The upgrade menu can be opened by any class as a quest item or for a 'secret' purpose. Classes and systems pertain to each other. Use a Boost to... We can call it "the black magic" for fans of the popular studio Microsoft which has recently left three mysterious glitches in the game. It is stated that the mentioned problems have been confirmed to remain unsolved. One of the possible reasons of such behavior is the fact that the release version does not work on some computers. In response to such statements the "GH2" - version of the game has been created which was dedicated to fixing the problems. It has been designed by fans of the game and developers. Currently, the GH2 is based on the "TR 1" modification of the game's engine. It is a fairly early state of the project, but still its developers are able to offer fans of the game many advantages. The most noticeable one among them is that, if you play on this version of the game, there will be no more "weirdness" in the game's engine. Developers promise that all parts of the game, including new content, will be compatible with this version. Thus, if you have a laptop or desktop and are fond of playing the game, you can download the "GH2" right now and become a part of this competition. The first and foremost feature that will be introduced in this version of the game is a comfortable navigation system. In this game, all quests can be researched even if you are far away from a location of study. We will remind you that the "GH2" version is still in beta mode. Thus, the developers, who've created it, still try to find and delete bugs. Before the official release, it is advised not to do any actions you might regret afterwards. We remind you that the "GH1

Climb that rock...HANG ON! My name is Jack. I've been a member of the Institute for the past two years. They train me in the all-out art of climbing, which I can now use to survive. I know that these walls will be my ultimate shelter in the end. They will protect me from the elements, and others. The Institute is my home, they gave me everything...including you. Now, I must get through the Beta Program to become a full member. If I pass, I will finally be allowed to live my life without fear. Make the best of your journey... Unlike other survival games, this game focuses on a single player story, with a dynamic narrative, where your decisions, actions and rival players' reaction will affect your entire journey. As you progress through the game, you will encounter other players. At first, you will not be able to control them, just pass through them. Some will chase you. Some will save you, while others will hinder your progress. You will have to keep your eyes and ears open, find weaknesses in the environment to make yourself an advantage. Your decisions will determine the course of your next journey. TIP: Don't fall! What is beta testing? - Repeatable events - Several paths - Climbing environment: walls, gutters, handholds, vertical sections - Reticles for important game features and crucial decisions - Novel gameplay experience that interweaves your story with that of other players

How to play: Keybindings and Tutorial Just plug in your controller or keyboard, and press "start" to begin your journey. [Contact] Info Have any questions, suggestions, ideas or feedback? Want to work with us? You can find out more information by contacting us.

Copacabana is a Brazilian Drug Cartel. The police are using a drug dealer who tipped them off about the shipment. The lab technician who was going to tag the drugs have been kidnapped but the police got her smartphone. If they can track the drugs they can get tips on the Cartel and bust them. The cop in charge is on his way to the area to check on things, he has a big lead on how many people are involved and how many are in there. He also has a lead on the girl but does not want to break in until he can be sure it's not a trap. He is joined by the lab technician and the drug dealer. The undercover police is tracking the cell phones, hoping to get clues and a way into the drug deal, but the police cannot find any personal information, just numbers, the other police do not know if the drug deal is on or not. If they get what they need, they can infiltrate the deal and hopefully bust the gang. What's new in Samsara:

Bendy and the Ink Machine is a children's book written and illustrated by British author Philip Pullman and published by Viking Press. It was first published in 1980, and following its initial publication, the rights were sold to Egmont for further publication. It was published in a revised and illustrated edition by Egmont in 2011. In the US, it was published by Renaissance Learning, Inc.. The title figures, Bendy, an anthropomorphic line, and his sidekick Ink, are two children appearing in what is otherwise a traditional children's story, a quality which Pullman later said was gained by including "a black cat, thatched cottages, heavy boots and a dead friend". The book takes its title from the bendy line drawing medium that Bendy uses to tell the story. Origins and publication Bendy and the Ink Machine was originally a story Pullman had sketched for inclusion in Stories from King Solomon's Book (1980), a collection of stories for children, following its 1971 publication. Initially illustrated by Dorian Kindersley, the character was redesigned in 1977 by Julian Crouch, and the book was published by Viking Press in 1980, with illustrations on the front cover drawn by Debbie Lee. Pullman later wrote that he never gave the story any further thought until reading a book review at The Times in 1986. He wrote the short story and illustrations for the collection Where I Live (1996), and was thereafter asked to write and illustrate a book about animals for children. The resulting book became Life, the Universe and Everything (1997), which led to the invitation to illustrate the Tales of Godly Fiction series published by Scholastic Corporation, beginning with The Book of Dust (1998), which was published the following year. The story was subsequently re-illustrated for the Black Library book by Oneiros Group. The illustrations were a collaboration between Pullman and members of the Oneiros group, with the book set in their spare time to fund their own projects, in a "wordless and unsteady" style. Early in the writing process for the story, Pullman had wanted to write a book on the failure of the education system in England, and had intended to parody A.A.

Milne's Pooh books. Pullman's main inspiration was the French writer Louis-Ferdinand Céline's anti-pacifist autobiographical novels Journey to the End of the Night (1931) and Letter to a German Lieutenant (1932)
