Activist chases girls with spiked bat & sticks knife at White House By - December 11, 2018

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who authorities say lunged at two girls with a wooden bat and a knife, leaving one with a minor facial injury, has been charged with assault. 38-year-old Patrick Carlineo, of Washington, was arrested and charged with two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon following the assaults at the White House and an event at the U.S. Capitol, according to charging documents filed Tuesday. Police say that after Carlineo chased down the two girls, ages 4 and 9, Tuesday afternoon, he pulled a knife and attacked them as they sat on a bench at the White House. The younger girl suffered minor facial injuries. The New York City-based security firm recently did away with the Assistant to the President for Cybersecurity and Technology, and its new director, Emil Michael, who played a key role in the White House's decision to place blame for the Trump campaign's hacked emails on the Russian government, is resigning to become the CTO of Cambridge Analytica, the company working for the Trump campaign. The problem facing the Trump campaign is that every day, its campaign manager, Brad Parscale, leaves "the details about the Russian hacking into the DNC's network to Barack Obama's Director of National Intelligence, James Clapper, and the Department of Homeland Security." When Brad Parscale, Trump's campaign manager, made a public statement last week, he didn't defend the Trump campaign's tweets back in August suggesting that the DNC hack was the work of the Russians, or its accusation of the DNC for being a "laughingstock" for allowing hackers into its network. Instead, he took the blame on himself for the exposure of emails belonging to the Democratic National Committee. "While I cannot discuss the basis for these tweets, they were communicated to me by the Trump campaign, to which I had no objection." By not doing that,

Parscale has taken the idea that the Russians hacked the DNC and put it out into the mainstream as a factual issue, and by taking credit for not releasing it, Trump's campaign manager has a good deal of explaining to do. The way to fix it would be for the White House to let Parscale stay his post

What's New In How To Download Adobe Photoshop On Chromebook?

Age-associated changes in circulating lipid levels. High density lipoproteins (HDL) are known to decrease after the age of 50 years, and apolipoprotein A-1 (Apo A-I) decreases after 60 years. Serum triglycerides increase after 70 years, and apolipoprotein B (Apo B) increases after 20 years. Both Apo A-I and Apo B decrease after 80 years. Low density lipoproteins (LDL) increase after the age of 20 years, and Apo B increases after 60 years. The rate of increase in LDL, Apo B, and Apo B/Apo A-I ratio slows after the age of 80 years. HDL and Apo A-I decrease and Apo B increases at a slower rate after the age of 80 years.

Dietary changes may be an explanation for these age-associated changes in circulating lipids. The majority of subjects eat a low fat diet, even after the age of 50 years, but most subjects consume more than the recommended amount of cholesterol. When the subjects ate a low fat, cholesterol free diet, their plasma cholesterol decreased. This decrease was greater in younger subjects. A similar decrease in Apo B occurred with the decrease in cholesterol. When young subjects eat a high fat diet, their plasma triglycerides increase to a greater extent than that observed with a decrease in dietary cholesterol. Plasma triglycerides and Apo B levels decrease at a slower rate after the age of 70 years. However, LDL and Apo B/Apo A-I ratio increase at a similar rate with aging. The change in the ratio of Apo B/Apo A-I to LDL is also slower in the elderly than in the young. Solar power is on the cusp of becoming a new dominant source of energy, and a major gain in efficiency would make it even more promising. The photovoltaic industry has grown significantly since 2000, and its market reach is expanding to new areas. The North American market size for solar-electricity is growing as well, but it also has a long way to go before it reaches the pinnacle of the clean-energy market. But one factor has been missing, and may be coming into play more often: price competition. Even though solar has seen substantial price drops over the years, it never has reached the point of a real price war, and that may be about to change. Last week, the Greensboro News & Record published the results
