I just got an email from a reader who has just started reading 'Ecology Against Capitalism', my third book, which is a collection of some of my writings on ecological politics over the last fifteen years. At the end of the email he said that he was going to order a copy. It's a small victory, but it's a nice one. Thank you to all of you who are reading this stuff. Here is the email: Hi Paul, I want to tell you that you have been a model of helping people to understand why we need ecology and I would like to thank you for that. I have just finished reading your third book "Ecology against capitalism" and am very impressed. I have learned from your books that there really is a danger in the environmental movement becoming just another social movement, but that all social movements in the end are about human well being. I have also realized how much of an influence the social movements of the 60s and 70s are on the contemporary environmental movement. For example, the environmental movement in general feels so much pressure to be on the
