©SEGAGlucagon-like peptide-1 (GLP-1): A multi-functional intestinal growth factor. GLP-1 is a brain-gut peptide that exerts a variety of physiological functions in the central nervous and gastrointestinal systems. GLP-1 exerts beneficial effects on the regulation of appetite, satiety, energy expenditure and blood glucose in the brain, and promotes intestinal growth. Experimental data indicate that the action of this peptide in the brain is mediated by neuronal mechanisms and does not involve changes in blood glucose, though peripheral effects are explained by changes in glucose levels. The intestinotrophic effect of this peptide is not directly related to its effect on food intake. The action of GLP-1 in the brain is based in the activation of its receptor, which is coupled to the G(s)/cAMP/PKA pathway. GLP-1 is also able to stimulate cell proliferation in gastrointestinal mucosa. The possible mechanisms underlying this effect are in part related to activation of the glucagon-like protein-1 receptor (GLP-1R) and its G(s)-like signaling in intracellular secondary messengers. This peptide has direct and indirect effects on the insulin receptor and activates GLP-1 receptor together with the insulin receptor. The expression of GLP-1R is increased in different tissues and in inflammatory intestinal diseases; this may help the restoration of intestinal growth in inflammatory conditions. GLP-1 has a multi-functional intestinal growth factor activity, contributing to the healing and regeneration of intestinal mucosa in different intestinal diseases.

Q: spark dataframe.withColumn function I have a data frame with three columns called day, id and orderValue. I want to get a new data frame having all the id and all the order value contained in the data frame.

val dataframe = sparkSession.read.csv(filepath) val newdata = dataframe.withColumn("id", when(col("day") === "11",col("id")).otherwise(col("id"))) my result looks like this

When I learned about it, it was only of those rare Blades that had any idea what it was. Meanwhile they all swear that they do not know a thing... It starts at the end of the night, where the 0 is sleeping. The penumbra barge in and, as soon as the sleep -wakes, the Omega of the Void is woken up by him/her. The 0 is horrified at the sight of an ouroboros in Black. After some minutes of obsessiveness, the 0 finally realizes that it is simply a chalk drawing. When the drawn 0 touches the ouroboros, the user of the ouroboros is not able to do anything to it/him/her. The user of the ouroboros
