The first two text inputs have the same name, so they match each other perfectly. The last text input does not match the first two, so it doesn't match. I want to be able to tell if $_POST[firstInput] and $_POST[secondInput] exist or not, and then use them to update the text input if they are present. How would I do this? And would it be a good idea to have some kind of error message pop up if either one of the $_POST's doesn't exist? A: You can use an array to check if both have been posted, like this: $firstInput = $_POST['firstInput']; $secondInput = $_POST['secondInput']; if (empty($firstInput)) { //do something if the firstInput is empty } if (empty($secondInput)) { //do something if the secondInput is empty } if (!isset($firstInput, $secondInput) || empty($firstInput) || empty($secondInput)) { //do something if they aren't set } Padma Lakshmi Crude: 'PRETTY NASTY'?
